LIBRARY

It is hoped that The Forfar Directory and Year-Book will be found useful for reference regarding local matters. The contents embrace a List of Householders whose names appear in the Roll of Voters for the year; Trade List—classified and alphabetically arranged; particulars regarding all Public Boards; and a full List—carefully compiled—of the Associations, Societies, &c., in town. To these there is also added an Almanac (with Diary) containing general information.

Being of a handy size, and issued at a nominal price, it is within the reach of all.

GARDENING.

NEW ground intended for a flower-garden should now be forwarded; and the borders, beds, and other compartments dug ready for planting. In mild weather anemones may be planted. Carnations in pots should, at this season, be kept in a warm situation, in frames, or have the shelter of mats in severe weather. Plant in pots any desirable roots, plants, flowers, and shrubs. Plant suckers of roses, lilacs, and various other shrubs in open weather. In the kitchen-garden, in open weather, forward all necessary digging and trenching. Prepare composts for hotbeds with rich earth, light surface loam, and rotten manure all blended together in a heap. Plant for seed good-headed old cabbages and savoys; also carrots, turnips, onions, &c. Plant out some strong early plants of cabbages. Sow a small portion of carrots on a warm border. Earth up celery in open weather. Cucumbers, for earliest crops, may be sowed in hotbeds. Sow a small portion of lettuce seed in a warm border. Sow early hotspur peas on a south border. Plant potatoes.

GARDENING.

ANNUALS will require thinning, some pricking out and transplanting, and some sorts sowed. Water the patches of hardy annuals in dry weather. Keep weeds under in all parts, by timely hoeing and hand-weeding. Early anemones done flowering should be taken up, and the offsets separated. Place sticks to the flower-stalks of carnations. About the middle of the month, place out dahlias in borders and clumps for flowering. Climbing honeysuckles train to walls or stakes. Sow more mignonette in beds to flower in succession. Plant in pots some roots of tuberoses. In the kitchen-garden, carefully weed old and new asparagus beds. Plant successional crops of beans of the large or sword long-pods; also broad beans, and plant full crops of kidney beans. Plant out early-raised plants of broccoli. Hoe between cabbages, and draw earth about the stems; plant out spring-raised cabbages. Clear carrots from weeds. Early-raised celery plant out in trenches for blanching, and prick out young celery from the seed-bed.

GARDENING.

KEEP the borders neat by regulating the plants, by weeding, hoeing, and raking. Give proper support to climbing plants; cut down decayed flower-stalks. Piping may now be performed to propagate pinks, carnations, &c. Annual flower plants of many sorts will now require final removing or transplanting; thin hardy annuals. Take up bulbous roots done flowering. Box edgings should be clipped after rain. Water in dry weather all plants in pots, and others lately planted. Prick out seedling carnations; begin to lay carnations, and plant pipings. Prune any disorderly shrubs. In the kitchen-garden, particular attention will now be required in weeding, thinning, hoeing, and watering many principal crops. Plant once a fortnight further successional crops of beans of larger or smaller kinds; sow full crops of the best dwarf kinds of kidney beans. Plant broccoli out in moderate crops; hoe advancing crops of cabbages, and draw earth to the stems; prick out young seedling cabbage plants.

GARDENING.

CLIPPING will now be required in all sorts of hedges, cutting them close and even at the sides and tops. Budding may be performed in any curious roses. Make layers of all curious carnations, also of cloves, double scarlet or mule sweet-williams, and capital varieties of pinks. Save seeds of annuals and biennials, and of any perennials required that are ripe. Thin the patches of large kinds of hardy annuals. Seeds of bulbous roots may be sown. In dry weather, water all plants in pots every day. Showery weather is proper for all pricking-out, planting, and sowing. In the kitchen-garden, dig vacant ground cleared from summer crops, and manure the same for principal autumn and winter crops. Guard ripening seed from birds. No hot-bed sowing is required at this season. Herbs for drying and distilling should now be gathered. Terminate the general cutting or gathering of asparagus for the season. Plant a moderate crop of beans for late production; sow a principal late crop of kidney beans. Young cabbage plants should now be planted out for autumn and winter.

GARDENING.

CONTINUE to dig and manure vacant beds and borders. Flowering plants requiring transplanting to flower the same year, may be removed with balls. Gather all sorts of annual flower seeds as they attain maturity. Plant out bulbous offsets, especially small ones, in separate beds from the main bulbs. Finish laying carnations; early layers and pipings well rooted, plant off in beds or pots. Daisies may be slipped, or the roots parted into smaller or larger sets, and planted in beds and borders. Plant offsets, slips, or cuttings of pansies in a shady corner. Evergreens may be removed and planted. In the kitchen-garden, prepare cleared ground by digging and manuring. Ripening seeds gather as they attain perfection. Plant beans for a Michaelmas crop; and a moderate crop of kidney beans may be sowed. Finish planting the last principal crop of broccoli. Sow cabbage seed for a full crop of young plants to stand the winter; finish planting main crops of savoys. Sow a small crop of carrots, to come in for drawing young in the spring.

GARDENING.

DIG vacant beds and borders, for bulbous roots and other perennial and biennial flowering plants. Edgings may be planted of box, thrift, daisies, &c. Plants in pots may be fresh-earthed at the top. Pipings of pinks and carnations that are well struck and advanced in growth should be planted in beds, borders, and pots. Gather seeds of flowers as they ripen. Part roots of perennials done flowering. Finish planting autumnal bulbs. Finish clipping hedges. Layers of carnations separate from the old stools, and plant in beds and pots. Begin planting hyacinths. In the kitchen-garden, hoe and earth up the stems of late crops of beans, and, if in blossom or podding, let the stems be topped; and hoe and earth up the last advancing young crops of kidney beans. Early-planted broccoli will now begin to head for use. Finish planting out the last late crop of savoys for small heading. The main crops of spring-sown carrots should now be in good perfection. Earth up to blanch celery in trenches of advanced growth.

GARDENING.

CLIMBING plants of different sorts may now be planted; also flowering shrubs. Place seed pots and boxes in warm situations, to remain in shelter all winter. Finish gathering seeds of flowers; this must be done in dry weather. Biennial flowers, raised in spring and summer, may be removed with full roots, and transplanted into the borders. Protect autumnal bulbs in flower from rain and cold. Bulbs of lilies should be mostly all planted. Plant anemones for early spring flowering; and finish planting some best kinds of carnation layers. This month, in the kitchen-garden, all sowing and principal planting should be finished for this year. Prepare vacant ground, by manuring and digging, for future crops. Begin the winter dressing of asparagus beds; asparagus to force may be planted in a hot-bed. Plant a small crop of mazagan beans in a south border. The main crops of savoys will now be finally cabbaged for general use. Earth up celery as it advances in growth. Potatoes of full growth should be dug up and housed, to keep for winter.

GARDENING.

Forward ground-work for planting, and other designs in walks, lawns, and shrubberies. Beds and borders, designed for planting bulbs and other flowers, prepare by proper digging. Edgings may be planted. Climbing and trailing plants of the shrubby kind may now be planted, and trained against walls. Prepare composts for flower-beds of good light garden earth, sandy loam, and rotted manure. Shelter tender plants in pots and beds from frost. Part roots of perennial flowers, to increase the sorts required; hardy perennials may be planted. Finish the autumn planting of hyacinths. In the kitchen-garden a few articles may be sown and planted for early crops next year. Trench vacant ground, laying the earth of each trench in a rough ridge, to pulverise and improve by the weather. Clear advancing young crops from weeds. Plant more mazagan beans on a warm border. Finish planting out cabbages, all that are intended before spring. Finish digging up the main crops of carrots.

GARDENING.

DIG beds, borders, and shrubbery compartments for intended planting. Vacancies in borders, clumps, shrubberies, and other plantations, may now be supplied with roots, plants, shrubs, trees, &c., in open weather. The hardiest kinds of perennial flowers may be transplanted in open weather. Defend curious and tender plants, in pots or beds, from severe frost and snow with an awning of mats. Bulbous roots may still be planted in mild dry weather. Place the tenderest sorts of plants in pots in frames; others in a warm situation, or plunged in some dry ground, to secure the roots from frost. In the kitchen-garden, continue preparing vacant ground by occasional manuring, or general digging and trenching in ridges, to enrich for spring sowing and planting. All sowing and planting in the open ground, perform only in open dry weather. Sow a few early peas and radishes on warm borders, and small salading and cucumbers in hot-beds. Plant early beans, and strong cabbage plants; in hot-beds, asparagus and cucumbers. Dig up esculent roots to lay in sand.
